a girl in space

Made with ComicCraft

Panel 1: Drifting

NARRATION: The silence of the void is heavy, a cold weight pressing against her helmet. Out here at the edge of the map, only the dying stars keep her company.

DIALOGUE:

Benita: "Day forty-two. Still no response from the colony."

Computer: "Oxygen reserves at fifteen percent."

Panel 2: The Signal

NARRATION: Suddenly, the chaotic dust of the nebula aligns, folding into impossible geometric angles. The blue light reflects in her eyes, pulsing with a rhythm like a heartbeat.
DIALOGUE:
Benita: "That is not a natural formation."
Computer: "Warning. Unknown frequency detected."

Panel 3: The Arrival

NARRATION: The tether snaps with a silent jolt as the cosmic gate pulls her inward. She vanishes into the blinding white, leaving behind nothing but the empty, quiet dark.

DIALOGUE:

Benita: "It is not a beacon. It is a doorway."

Computer: "Signal lost."